Leadville Democrat. But few people are aware of the fact that the facings of the High School are constructed of gold-bearing stone, but it is an actual truth that is testified to by Mr. King, the architect, as well as those who did the masonry. It was obtained from a mountain near Granite, upon which several gold mines have been discovered, and which are at present being operated with much profit. In antiquity there was extravagance visible in all the architectural efforts, but to witness the repetition of agance visible in all the architectural efforts, but to witness the repetition of those times in this era, and in the earthonaic metropolis, is something indeed startling. It is a fact, however, that the facings of the institution mentioned are made of the gold rock, and it can be proved. During the work of erection, and when the masons had the stone in hand and were dressing it this was discovered. Upon one occasion they were sawing a huge block of the material in which a streak of gold about the size of a knife-blade was discovered by the workmen. It oreadiscovered by the workmen. It steated quite a sensation at the time, but nothing particular was said of it on the outside, and the work was the outside, and the work was contin-ued. The atcods are payed with silver, or slag containing the mineral, and it is probable that a handful of dirt from most any place would assay from one to ten ounces. This report was re-garded as somewhat fabulous, but when the fact goes out that the school house is built of gold it will indeed provoke a skeptical smile.

A Fight on the Edge of a Precipies Little Book Gazette:

S. R. Trewathan and Robert Monte, two well-known citizens of Searcy county, were riding on horseback along the summit of the Boston mountains, when they engaged in a quarrel which gradually grew hotter until blows succeeded angry words. At last Monter drew back his whip and brought the lash down across Trewabrought the lash down across Trewathan's face with a stinging blow. The latter, gowled to madness, sprang from his horse, and, gathering up a atone from the highway, hurled it at his antagonist. To his utter horror he beheld Monter totter and fall from his beast over the edge of the precipice and tumble far down the mountain side, crushing the bushes that came in his way and starting stones from their resting places to go rattling down to the base. At last his victim passed from view, but search was made and Monter was found at the foot of the cliff terribly mangled and in a dying condition. in a dying condition.

A Strange Mistake.

Two Polish women, one married and the other single, were among the nmigrants who arrived at New York scently in a European steamer. At satle Garden both were found to be Castle Garden both were found to be suffering from small-pox, and were sent to the hospital. On the way to the hospital their tickets were changd in some manner, and the married woman was entered as the single one, and vice some. The husband of the former went to the hospital frequently to inquire for his wife, and although the direct side and although the side of the side thorities, supposing the other was the married woman, gave encouraging reports of her condition. At last she was pronounced cured and the husband out for, and mon his arrival the mistake was for the first time discovered. Of course the husband was disconsolate, but the romance of the thing may strike him by and by, and suggest to him that he marry the woman who so singularly took the place of his wife.

The Tombstone Nugget says that the May yield of the Tombstone mines was $441,808, divided as follows: Western 29 days run—$138,000; Grand Central; 30 days run—$138,000 (approximated by the Superintendent); Tombstone M. & M. This shows an increase of ever $51,000 over the April product of $430,000. The Tombstone and Western Companies have declared their usual dividends, aggregating $125,000, which to date makes a total of $1,725,000 dishursed by these two compaies. In the spring of 1877 Senator Blaine, being called on to make an energetic protest against some phase of President Hayes' policy touching Governors Packard and Chamberlain, concluded a lengthy telegram to the Boston Her-ald of April 10th in the following words, published next day in the Associated Press dispatches:

"I trust, also, that both Governors know that the Boston press no more represents the STALWART Republications and all the statements and all the statements are sententially and all the statements and all the statements are sententially and all the statements and all the statements are sententially as a sentential and all the statements are sententially as a sentential and all the statements are sententially as a sentential and all the represents the STALWART Republi-can feeling of New England on the pending issues than the same press did when it demanded the enforcement of the Fugitive Slave Law in 1853."

The term was necessary to the pro-per expression of Blaine's usual vigor in thought and speech. The Hayes men laughed at it, but as usual the idea survived ridicule, and "stalwart" took its place in the political dictionary. Conkling did not see may use for the new coin until a crisis came in his own affairs, when he found that he could not strut acceptably without a new feather. He accordingly borrow ed one from the Blaine quiver, and wears it with much self-satisfaction It seems as though Blaine had foreseen the Conkling funeral, for the remains are decorated with his offerings.

THE STAR ROUTES.

The New York Times editorially hints that an effort is being made by Brady and associates in the Star route rascalities to induce the administra tien to let up on them. They will use their influence to the utmost. There is not the slightest reason for fearing that anything these rascals can do will deter either James or McVeagh from the course upon which they have entered. It is to be hoped that there is no ground for fearing they may be able to atture or drive any of the official associates or the officials superior of these men from giving them all the support they need. But there are threats and murmurs that are disquieting. Public sentiment ought to be aroused on this subject and to demand, with unmistakable voice, the strengthening of the hands of those engaged in this prosecu tion and the baffling of the devices of the conspirators who are at bay.

THE GRANT INTERVIEW.

Gen. Grant in his zeal for his able friend Conkling is making some very thoughtless and undignified exhibithoughtless and undignified exhibi-tions of himself. The Gassers pub-lishes a Heruld interview which was had to-day with Grant at Pittsburg, Pa. The interview is not interesting, except in showing the blind devotion of great Grant to captious Conkling nd pliant Platt. GRANT INTERVIEWED.

The Stient Talkative Man Discourses anent the Grievances of Rosey and Tommy.

> Special to the GAZETTE. NEW YORK, June 17.

A Herald reporter has interviewed U. S. Grant at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and in answer to questions the latter said: "Garfield is a man without a backbone; a man of fine ability, but lacking in stamina. He wants to curring enmity of all men who are around him."

This is why he threw a sop to Conkling and Platt.

"Robertsons appointment, I am sure, was settled before March 11th -yes, before the Chicago Convention. Robertson knew that if my nomi, nation could be prevented he would become collector of New York.

I do not suppose he had a direc pledge. The contract was made with Blaine, and Blaine is keen and wary.

Robertson, however, knew he was to get the appointment. Blaine falled, and Garfield was nominated and wind blew too strong for small yachts, pledged to Robertson. If Robertson him, yet he was afraid to say so. Why cers and crew of the Rodgers left in did not he say openly, 'I am going to the best of health and spirits. appoint Robertson.'

I do not think Blaine has personally said anything to Garfield in the matter. He wants to be in the position to say that since he has been Secretary of State he has never interfered with any appointments, and thinks that he can say that he has not said anything. But still through him Robertson's nomination was dictated, and through him insisted upon."

The Reporter asked: "Are you go ing to New York to take part in the fight?"

"No. I have business there, and I am out of politics, except as a citizen who exercises the right to vote and think as he pleases."

The Effect of Fiction.

N. Y. Sun.

Emma Newman, the young daugh-ter of a Philadelphia widow, was much too slight and refined to bear the hardships of poverty. She could not get much work to do, and that which she obtained she was unable to do satisfactory. Her mother was ill, there was nobody to help her, and there was not a cent or a morsel of food in the house. While greatly depressed by these misfortupes she came across a story paper containing the picture of a girl jumping off the Brooklyn bridge. She read the first chapters of the remance and found a remarkably close resemblance between the plight of the heroise and her own. She at once resolved on committing suicide, and made the attempt by jumping from the Gerard Avenue bridge into the Schuylkill river. She was rescued, however, by the Undine Boat Club, which chanced to be exercising near by there.

The attention of the Government of in Republic has been called to the xistence of a horrible and nefarious traffic which is carried on over the Brazilian frontier. It is a traffic in hu-man beings, a veritable slave trade which the civilization and humanity of the age condemn with horror. The Indians of the Caquette, a Colombian Territory on the Brazillian border, sell the prisoners which are taken in the frequent wars among their various tribes, to the Brazilian traders who visit them every year. The poor cap-tives suffer terrible hardships in their course down the Amazon and its tributaries to the agricultural regions be-low, and here the horror of their situ-ation is intensified if possible, as they are sold as slaves to the planters, when their doom of perpetual servitude is sealed. The traffic has been going on for years, and we hope, in the interest of poor helpless humanity, the Colom-bian Government will make such rep-resentations as will put a stop to such a diagrace forever.

Substitute for Gold.

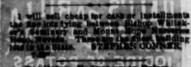

Mechanical News.

One of the recently introduced substitutes for gold, which has become very popular in some of the jewelry and other manufactories of fine wares in France, is composed as follows:
One hundred parts of copper of the purest quality, fourteen of ziac of tin, aix of magaesia, three and six-tenths of as ammoniac, himestone and cream of tartar, the parts by weight. The copper is first melted, then the magnesia, sal ammoniac, limestone and cream of tartar in powder are added separately and gradually. The whole mass is kept stirred for half an hour, the zinc of tin beingdropped in, piece by piece, the stirring being kept up till they melt. Finally the crucible is covered and the mass kept in fusion for thirty-five minutes, and the scum being removed, the metal is poured into moulds and is soon ready for use. The alloy thus made is represented as being fine-grained, malleable, takes a high polish and does not easily caldize.
